The classic Japanese garden is an artificial garden that reproduces natural scenic beauty in a heightened intensity. Its charm lies in its subtle, highly sophisticated layout in a limited space. The aim of Japanese landscape gardening, which has a long history of development, is to create a scenic composition by arranging rocks, trees, shrubs and running water in such a way as to create the sweep of a vast landscape.

Japanese gardens are usually referred to as the “hill garden” ("tsukiyama") and the “waterless stream garden” (”karesansui”). The hill garden features a hill usually combined with a pond and a stream. It can be viewed from various vantage points, as you stroll along the paths, or appreciate it from within a house to which it is attached. Fine specimens of this style are the gardens of Tenryuji Temple and Saihoji Temple, both in Kyoto. In the dry landscape garden, rocks and sands form the main elements, the sea being symbolized not by water but by a layer of sand with furrows suggestive of the rippling movement, and waterfalls by an arrangement of rocks. Examples of this style are the gardens of Ryoanji Temple and Daitokuji Temple, also in Kyoto.

With the introduction of the tea ceremony in the 14th century, the chaniwa (garden attached to the tea-ceremony house) came to be designed and laid out. Actually, it is not a garden but a narrow path leading up to the chashitsu (tearoom proper). The aim of the designer of this style was to create a feeling of solitude and detachment from the world. A tea garden is mainly featured by the placement of stepping stones.

* Listed in this leaflet are principal Japanese gardens in Kyoto, Tokyo and other areas.
* Most of the tea gardens are not open to the public.
* The gardens are mostly closed from Dec. 28 to Jan. 4.
* Ticket windows are usually closed 30 min. or 1 hr. before closing time.

Kyoto

Gardens of Imperial Palaces and Villas:

11 Kyoto Imperial Palace (京都御所): Stroll garden designed by Kobori Enshu (1579–1647). Located almost in the center of the city, this huge park-like compound includes several palace buildings. It was also the location of many fine residences belonging to the ranking noble court families. These residences were torn down and a massive park, with lawns and over 9,000 trees, was created. Today, this extensive park area is a highly popular recreation and relaxation zone. Addr.: Kyoto Gyoen-nai, Kamigyo-ku, Kyoto. 10-min. walk from Marutamachi Sta.

13 Katsura Imperial Villa (桂離宮): A typical stroll garden laid out in the 17th century. This garden is renowned as an outstanding example of Japanese landscape gardening. Addr.: Misono, Katsura Saikyo-ku, Kyoto. 20-min. walk from Katsura Sta. on Hankyu Dentetsu Line; or reached from Katsura-Rikyu-mae Bus Stop. Guided tours (in Japanese) are available.

15 Shugakuin Imperial Villa (修学院離宮): Stroll garden laid out in the 17th century. This garden is characterized by a complete unification of nature and garden. Addr.: Shugakuin, Sakyo-ku, Kyoto. 15-min. walk from Shugakuin-Rikyu-michi Bus Stop or Shugakuin Sta. on Eizan Dentetsu Line. Guided tours (in Japanese) are available.

Other Gardens in Kyoto (in alphabetical order)

1. Byodo-in Temple (平等院): Originally a pond garden for boating laid out in the 11th century. The construction of the temple and its garden was intended to recreate the Buddhist paradise in this world. Addr.: 116, Renge, Uji, Kyoto. 40 min. by train from Keihan-Sanjo to Uji on Keihan-Uji Line, or 30 min. by train from Kyoto Sta. to Uji Sta. on JR Nara Line. Open: 8:30–17:30. Admission: ¥600.

3. Daigo-ji Samboin Temple (醍醐寺三宝院): Landscape garden for viewing from within a building, laid out in the 16th century. It is one of the finest examples showing the legendary fortuitous crane, tortoise and isle of eternal youth using stones and spring ponds of the type in the Momoyama Period. Addr.: 22 Higashi-jo Oji-chō, Daigo, Fushimi-ku, Kyoto. 15-min. walk from Subway Daigo Sta. on Tozai Line. Open: 9:00–17:00 (–16:00 1st Sun. of Dec.–Feb.). Admission: ¥600.

4. Daitoku-ji Daisen-in Temple (大德寺大仙院): Dry landscape garden built in the 16th century. This garden is famed as a masterpiece of gardening developed for Zen temples. When you open the sliding paper doors, you will see the garden creating a panoramic scene resembling the landscape paintings you can find on sliding partition doors or folding screens in traditional Japanese homes. It represents the mental state of a Zen Buddhist priest going through ascetic practices in a natural surrounding. Addr.: Daitoku-ji, Murasakino, Kita-ku, Kyoto, (in the Daitoku-ji Temple compound). Near Daitoku-ji-mae Bus Stop. Open: 9:00–16:30. Admission: ¥400.

5. Daitoku-ji Hojo (Chief Abbot’s Chamber): Dry landscape garden constructed in the 17th century, designed by Kobori Enshu (1579–1647). The east garden depicts the image of Buddha’s disciples practicing zazen meditation. This garden is only open to persons who join the Garden Tour operated daily. (See Garden Tours in Kyoto on Page 2.) Addr.: Daitoku-ji, Murasakino, Kita-ku, Kyoto. Individuals must join the tour to enter.

7. Ginkaku-ji Temple (Silver Pavilion): Stroll garden combined with a dry garden built in the 15th century. The layout was influenced by the thought of Zen Buddhism. The Ginkaku-ji pond waves in front of the silver pavilion and the Kogetsu-ji with its piles of sand are beautiful. Addr.: 2 Ginkaku-ji, Sakyo-ku, Kyoto. Near Ginkaku-ji-michi Bus Stop. Open: 8:30–17:00 (9:00–16:30 Dec.–Feb.). Admission: ¥500.

10. Jonang-ji Temple (朝南院): Four different types of gardens representing the respective styles of the Heian, Muromachi, Momoyama and Heisei periods (from the 10th century to the present). Addr.: 7 Toba Rikyu-cho, Nakajima, Fushimi-ku, Kyoto. Near Jonang-ji Bus Stop. 15-min. walk from Takeda Sta. on Subway Line or Kintetsu Line. Open: 9:00–16:30. Admission: ¥500.

11. Kaju-ji Temple (倉府寺): Strolling garden and also a dry landscape garden in front of the study hall. The stroll-type garden was originally built in the 10th century. Addr.: Niodo-jo, Kaju-ji, Yamashina-ku, Kyoto. 20 min. by bus to Kaju-ji Bus Stop from Yamashina Sta. (next to Kyoto Sta.) on Subway Ono Sta. and 6-min. walk. Open: 9:00–16:00. Admission: ¥400.

13. Koetsu-ji Temple (光悦寺): Tea garden with three tea houses, reconstructed in 1915. The temple and garden were originally built as the residence of Hon-ami Koetsu (1558–1637), a noted artist in the 17th century. This garden is famous for its attractive bamboo fences. Addr.: 29 Koetsu-ji, Takagamine, Kita-ku, Kyoto. 3-min. walk from Genko-koan-mae Bus Stop. Open: 8:00–17:00. Closed: Nov. 10–13. Admission: ¥300.

14. Minami-ji Temple (南禅寺): Originally a pond garden for boating laid out in the 14th century. The construction of the temple and its garden was intended to recreate the Buddhist paradise in this world. Addr.: 116, Renge, Uji, Kyoto. 40 min. by train from Keihan-Sanjo to Uji on Keihan-Uji Line, or 30 min. by train from Kyoto Sta. to Uji Sta. on JR Nara Line. Open: 8:30–17:30. Admission: ¥500.

15. Momozono-ji Temple (桃野院): Landscape garden for strolling around the pond to enjoy the changing view of the Momozono-ji Pond. Residence of the 1st Ashikaga Shogun Sumoto constructed in the late 14th century. Addr.: 116, Renge, Uji, Kyoto. 40 min. by train from Keihan-Sanjo to Uji on Keihan-Nara Line. Open: 9:00–17:00. 17. Sukiyabashi House (草場家): The garden was originally built in the 10th century. The layout of the garden was influenced by the thought of Zen Buddhism. The Ginkaku-ji pond waves in front of the silver pavilion and the Kogetsu-ji with its piles of sand are beautiful. Addr.: 2 Ginkaku-ji, Sakyo-ku, Kyoto. Near Ginkaku-ji-michi Bus Stop. Open: 8:30–17:00 (9:00–16:30 Dec.–Feb.). Admission: ¥500.
Manshuin Temple (曼殊院): Dry garden constructed in the 17th century. The washbasin with owls engraved on all four sides is a rarity. The low balustrade on the open veranda of the Ko-shoin (small study) represents a rudder, and it will take you towards the Horai (isle of eternal youth). Stone deep inside the garden. A composition of a painting seems created as you, upon a boat, watch the Tsuru and Kame Islands upon the sea. Addr.: 42 Takenouchicho, Ichijoji, Sakyo-ku, Kyoto. 15-min. walk from Ichijoji-Shimizucho Bus Stop. Open: 9:00–17:00. Admission: ¥600.

Ryoanji Temple (龍安寺): Dry garden constructed in the 15th century. Noted for stone arrangements in a rectangular space of white sand. A world cultural heritage site. With the ultimate beauty in its simplest form, removing everything that is unnecessary, you are able to actually experience the thoughts of Zen Buddhism, facing the garden and rejecting any superfluous explanations. Addr.: Goryonoshitamachi, Ryoanji, Ukyo-ku, Kyoto. Near Ryoan-ji-michi Bus Stop. Open: 8:00–17:00 (Mar.–Nov.); 8:30–16:30 (Dec.–Feb.). Admission: ¥500.

Saihoji Temple (西芳寺): Famous as a moss temple. A world cultural heritage site. It consists of upper and lower layers of arranged rockwork, the spring pond garden on the flat ground and the dry landscape on the mountainside, creating a world of “yugen” (quiet beauty or the subtle and the profound) with its 100 or so different kinds of moss and tree groves. A landscape garden in the go-round style or boating style. Reservations are required to visit. Addr.: 56 Kamigaya-cho, Matsuo, Nishigyo-ku, Kyoto 615. 15-min. walk from Kami-Katsura Sta. on Hankyu Arashiyama Line. Note: How to Apply for Admission Apply by mail from one week to 2 months ahead of the date of your intended visit. (Application must reach the temple at least one week before your visit.) Reception is from 2 months before the day you want to see it to a week before which is the closing date. On a return postcard, please write in date, time, representative’s address, name and number of people. Sightseeing time is one and a half hours, but depending on that day’s religious event, time for sightseeing differs. Cost is more than ¥3,000. Apply to: Sanpaikakari, 56 Matsuo-Jingatancho, Nishikyo-ku, Kyoto 615-8286. Tel: 075-391-3631.

Shisendo Temple (詩仙堂): Stroll garden with running water “yari-mizu,” laid out in the 17th century. by Ishikawa Jozan (1583–1672) a poet, scholar and the designer of the “sozu” or “shishi-odoshi.” The occasional tapping sound of “sozu” reverberates in the tranquility of the Chinese style garden, creating a refined atmosphere. Noted for the beauty of azaleas in spring and tinted foliage in autumn. Note: How to Apply for Admission...

Tenryuji Temple (天龍寺): Landscape garden for strolling and viewing from within a building constructed in the 14th century. The main motifs of this garden, which almost seems as though it were a landscape drawing in Indian ink, are Ryumon Falls and a stone bridge. A landscape of mountains, rivers and the ocean is presented with a pond and the above two in the center. Ryumon is a rapid current ravin which lies on the border of China’s Yungxian and Wanxian. There is a 3-tier waterfall that even fish can’t go up, but there’s a legend that if fish could go up the waterfall, they would become dragons. This represents the process of a zen priest attaining enlightenment after strict practice. The stone bridge is a symbol of the first step into the state of enlightenment. Addr.: Susukino-babacho, Saga Tenryuji, Ukyo-ku, Kyoto. 2-min. walk from Arashiyama Sta. on Keifuku Dentetsu Line. Open: 8:30–17:30 (–17:00 Oct. 21–Mar. 20). Admission: ¥500.

Tofukuji-Fundain Temple (東福寺方院): Dry landscape garden laid out in the 15th century. by Sesshu (1420–1506), a famous painter. The Kame-ishi or Tortoise Stone placed in the moss-covered garden surrounded by bamboo seems almost as if it were living and about to move. Addr.: Hommachi, Higashiyama-ku, Kyoto, (in the Tofukuji Temple compound). 10-min. walk from JR (or Keihan) Tofukuji Sta. Open: 9:00–17:00 (Apr.–Nov.), –16:30 (Dec.–Mar.). Admission: ¥300.

Tofukuji Hojo (Chief Abbot’s Chamber) (東福寺方丈): Dry gardens in four different types rebuilt in 1939. The north garden is famous for the moss and square stones creating an Ichimatsu checkered design. The coloring of leaves are exquisitely beautiful viewed from the roofed passage called Tsuutenkyo. Addr.: Hommachi, Higashiyama-ku, Kyoto, (in the Tofukuji Temple compound). 10-min. walk from JR (or Keihan) Tofukuji Sta. Open: 9:00–16:00 (Apr.–Oct.), 8:30–16:00 (Nov.), 9:00–15:30 (Dec.–Mar.). Admission: ¥400.

Tofukuji-Kaisando Temple (東福寺開山堂): Pond garden and dry garden, both constructed in the 18th century. The left side of the narrow passage from the entrance is an ichimatsu patterned dry landscape in the Zen Buddhist style. On the right is a pond garden in the Chikuzan fashioned samurai household study style. The two combined create an exquisite taste. Addr.: Hommachi, Higashiyama-ku, Kyoto. 10-min. walk from JR (or Keihan) Tofukuji Sta. Open: 9:00–16:00 (Apr.–Oct.), 8:30–16:00 (Nov.), 9:00–15:30 (Dec.–Mar.). Admission: ¥400.

Tojiin Temple (等持院): The family temple of successive Ashikaga Shogun generals. The west garden with its Fuyochi Pond is of a multifarious composition, with its trimmed hedges and dried-up waterfall work set against Kinugasayama and Ishibashi Bridge. Stroll garden constructed in the 14th c. Fuyochi Pond was built in the 18th century. Addr.: 63 Kitacho, Tojin, Kita-ku, Kyoto. Near Tojiin-mae Bus Stop. Open: 8:00–17:00. Admission: ¥500.

Tokyo

Hama Detached Palace Garden (浜離宮恩賜庭園): Strolling garden constructed in the 17th century. It is unique among Tokyo gardens in having a tidal pond that empties into Tokyo Bay. Addr.: Hamarikyu-Teien, Chuo-ku, Tokyo. 15-min. walk from Shimbashi Sta. Open: 9:00–17:00. Admission: ¥300.

Kiyosumi Garden (清澄庭園): Strolling garden laid out in the 19th century. It is celebrated for the rocks collected from all parts of Japan. Addr.: Kiyosumi, Koto-ku, Tokyo. 3-min. walk from Kiyosumi-Shirakawa Subway Sta. Open: 9:00–17:00. Admission: ¥150.

Koishikawa Korakuen Garden (小石川後楽園): Strolling garden constructed in the 17th century. has four special features: 1. The basic structure is traditional. 2. Its subtitle is the duplication of famous sites around Japan. 3. The Chinese gardening style is incorporated. 4. It was the first to create a Tsukiyama in the shape of Mt. Fuji. Addr.: 1 Koraku, Bunkyoku, Tokyo. 7-min. walk from Korakuen Subway Sta. Open: 9:00–17:00. Admission: ¥300.

Rikugien Garden (六義園): Strolling garden constructed in the 18th century. A garden created in the Edo period under the supervision of Yanagisawa Yoshiyasu, a former “kosho” (page) promoted to the highest rank ever as feudal lord. Being fond of waka poetry and Confucian teachings, he selected 88 scenes from his favorite poems and incorporated them in his gardening. The main motifs are the town’s prosperity in the Dokutsu-iwa (Cave Rock) and the prosperity of Imotoseyama Hill. The premises include a large pond with an island and a hill covered with a dense grove of trees. Addr.: Honkomagome, Bunkyoku, Tokyo. 8-min. walk from Komagome Sta. Open: 9:00–17:00. Admission: ¥300.

Higashi Gyoen Garden (東御苑): Part of the Imperial Palace open to the public. Different flowers can be enjoyed each season. Addr.: I-1 Chiyoda, Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo. Close to Takebashi Sta. on Subway Tozai Line. Open: 9:00–17:00 (Apr. 15–Aug.), 9:00–16:30 (Mar.–Apr. 14, Sep.–Oct.), 9:00–16:00 (Nov.–Feb.). Closed: Mon., Fri., and days with special Imperial occasions. Admission: Free.

Shinjuku Gyoen National Garden (新宿御苑): One of Tokyo’s largest and most popular parks for strolling and admiring the flowering shrubs and foliage. It is particularly splendid during the cherry blossom season. Addr.: 11 Naito-cho, Shinjuku-ku, Tokyo. 1-min. walk from Shinjuku Gyoenmae Sta. on Subway Marunouchi Line. Open: 9:00–16:30.
